

EAP026 Rescuing Liberian history: a pilot study to preserve and enable access to Liberia's Presidential and National Archives

This pilot project was completed in March 2006 and successfully surveyed the National and the Presidential Archives, creating a database of 1,442 sampled items, identifying their content, date, creator, format and preservation status.

The Liberian Archives Survey Database

This database is based on a 2005 survey of the Republic of Liberia's Presidential and National Archives, a project funded by the British Library's Endangered Archives Programme.

Presidential Archives: The Presidential Archives is located in Liberia's Executive Mansion. Originally known as the "Central File Room," it stored the active and archived records for the Executive Branch of the Liberian government. The bulk of the records (over 4,100 linear feet) span from the second half of the W.V.S. Tubman presidency through the Charles Taylor administration. Approximately 50% of the records are from the Ministry of State, Executive Mansion, and Ministry of State for Presidential Affairs. Most of the remaining records are from other Liberian government ministries and agencies.

National Archives: The Center for National Documents and Records/National Archives was established as the statutory repository for all inactive records of the Liberian government during the 1970s. Following the 1980 looting of the purpose-built National Archives facility in Sinkor, archive employees recovered and moved about 600 linear feet of surviving materials back to the Old Executive Mansion on Ashmun Street, the earlier site of the National Archives. Approximately 33% of the extant records surveyed were from the Ministries/Departments of Foreign Affairs, State, Defense and Finance. The remaining records came from a variety of sources including other Liberian government offices, business entities, civic and religious organizations.
