

EAP148: Inventory of archival holdings in Jamaica

Miss Nadine Hunt, York University, Canada

2007 award - Pilot project

£11,023 for 8 months

This project compiled inventories of original documentation published before 1800, currently in the possession of the Jamaica Archives, Roman Catholic Chancery's Archive, University of the West Indies (UWI), Mona and the National Library of Jamaica (NLJ).

At the Archives, the Manumission of Slaves, volumes 5 through 12 were digitised, and cover the period 1747-1778. The team compiled an inventory of approximately 150 items and 10 primary sources were digitised of the West Indies and Special Collection at the UWI, Mona. These documents cover the historical period 1493-1800. At the Chancery, Father Gerard McLaughlin was responsible for organising the archive and creating finding aids for the various collections. Several burial, baptismal and marriage records were digitised. At the National Library of Jamaica, the team compiled an inventory of approximately 90 items and 12 primary sources were digitised.

TITLE:	INVENTORY OF ARCHIVAL HOLDINGS IN JAMAICA
DATE OF MATERIAL:	c. 1600-1800
SCOPE OF PROJECT:	A survey of 4 archives/libraries

JAMAICA'S LEGAL STATUS: The Spanish Crown declared Jamaica as its colony in the late 1400s following its conquest of indigenous peoples. In 1655, English forces, in turn, captured Jamaica from the Spanish Crown, declaring Jamaica a colony of England. After a long period of British rule, Jamaica achieved its independence on 6 August 1962.

1. Jamaica Archives (JA)

Location of Archives:

Spanish Town, St. Catherine, Jamaica

Date(s) of Material:

c. 1655-present

Scope and Structure:

Materials are divided into 5 collections: public central, public local, statutory bodies, private, and ecclesiastical records.

1. Public central records are organized into two main groups, based on their office of origin: Administrative (Departments, Ministries and Agencies) and Legal (Courts of Law, although some court records are with the records from the Island Record Office).

2. Public local records consist of the surviving records of the Vestries, Municipal Boards, Parochial Boards and Parish Councils for seventeen parishes – St. Thomas-in-the-Vale, St. Catherine, St. James, Hanover, Trelawney, Kingston/St. Andrew, Westmoreland, Clarendon, St. Ann, St. Elizabeth, Portland, St. Thomas, St. Mary, Manchester, St. George, Port Royal and St. David.

3. Statutory bodies' records, formerly semi-public consist of documents produced by or received from quasi-government bodies or agencies with statutory authority.

4. Private records include papers and other documents of individuals and organizations, which are donated to or stored at the Archives by persons/institutions because of their historical value and significance. These materials include letters, diaries, and photographs and plantation estate journals.

5. Ecclesiastical records consist of materials generated by the Anglican Church, the Presbyterian Church (now part of the United Church of Jamaica and the Cayman Islands), the United Congregation of Israelites, the Moravian Church, the Methodist/Wesleyan Church, Jewish Synagogues and the Society of Friends (Quakers). There are gaps in all the record series noted so the dates given are the covering periods of the records. There are no records for the Baptist and Roman Catholic Churches although there are some printed materials on these denominations.

Creating Agencies:

The Jamaica Archives & Records is a department of the Ministry of Information, Culture, Youth and Sports. It is governed by the Archives Act of 1982 and the Archives Regulations of 1988.

Administrative history of the Archive:

The Jamaica Archives & Records Department originated in 1955 with the establishment of an Archives section in the Island Records Office and with the appointment of Mr. Clinton Black as Government Archivist.

Biographical history:

In 1659, the Office of the Island Secretary was established in Spanish Town, also known then as St. Jago de la Vega. This office, specifically the Secretary's Office of enrolments, served as the repository for all official documents related not only to government acts and pronouncements but also to notarised and civil documents filed by the free population of Jamaica, which then comprised of Europeans and some mixed-race and black people. Examples of notarised and civil documents deposited at the Island Secretary's office include: property deeds, land patents, slave manumission registers, wills and last testaments. The Island Secretary was dissolved by 1879, and the newly formed Island Records Office (IRO) assumed responsibility of storing historical, legal and statistical records.

By 1936, government authorities transferred the historical records derived from the law courts to the IRO, but little action was taken to organize them. Subsequently, these records were passed onto the Custody of the Institute of Jamaica in 1940, although they remained in Spanish Town. At the Institute, Clinton Black worked on these records, eventually he became the Institute's Archivist. Ultimately, therefore, these materials formed the nucleus of the 'Colonial Archives'.

As a result of an initiative of the Institute, Sir Hilary Jenkinson, the then head of the Public Record Office, London visited Jamaica in 1950 to advise on the care of these records. In his subsequent report he recommended the appointment of an Archives Committee to plan for the establishment of an archival institution and the appointment of a government archivist. In 1953, the Archives Committee was appointed and plans were increasingly made to fully implement the 1879 Records Law.

The Jamaica Archives remained a part of the Island Record Office until 1982 when the Archives Act, providing for modern archival legislation, was passed. This legislation established the role and functions of the Jamaica Archives which became a department in its own right. When responsibility for records management was added to the department in the late 1980s, and with the Government Records Centre established in Kingston, the name of the department was changed to the Jamaica Archives and Records Department.

Conditions governing access to the Material:

The records are open to the public.

Physical conditions and storage of Material:

The Jamaica Archives' building was erected in 1962. Documents are stored on the 1st and 2nd floors. Documents are shelved on open metallic shelves and a binding and repair facility exists within the building.

Existence of Finding Aids:

There are finding aids for the five main collections: public central, public local, statutory bodies, private, and ecclesiastical records.

Other Relationships:

The Government Archivist oversees three units, which operate under the Jamaica Archives and Records Department. These units are the Archives Unit (also known as the Jamaica Archives), the Government Records Centre and the Audio Visual Archives Unit. The Centre and Visual Unit are located in Kingston. The Centre provides storage of records awaiting their final disposition in keeping with their retention schedules. This Unit also advises and assists government entities in organizing their records according to established principles and guidelines, conducts workshops and training sessions and coordinates the network of Government Records and Information Managers (G-RIM). The Audio Visual Unit houses audio and visual materials primarily from the collection of the former Jamaica Broadcasting Corporation.

Administrative/Biographical history of the Archive:

The University of the West Indies (Mona) was established in 1948 as an external College of the University of London. The University was made independent in 1962. Soon after its emergence, the first University Librarian, Harold Holdsworth decided to acquire a collection of West Indian materials. This collection became known as the West Indies and Special Collections (WISC). In 1974, Kenneth E. Ingram, Librarian of the West Indies and Special Collections Department, expanded the manuscript section of the collection. Ingram also published descriptions of the Jamaican manuscript collection and compiled detailed bibliographic entries about Caribbean primary sources located in Jamaica and abroad. He especially located items stored in public archives and private hands within the British Commonwealth.

Conditions governing access to the Material:

The collection is to be used for research purposes only. Alumni, students, faculty, staff and visiting researchers of the UWI have access to the WISC Collection.

Physical conditions and storage of Material:

The materials are stored in a section of the Library, specifically in the Elsa Goveia Reading Room storage facility. Documents are shelved on open metallic shelves, cabinets and flat drawers. They are stored on the second floor of the building.

Existence of Finding Aids:

Index/Subject cards are available on site.

Other Relationships:

The University Archives and Records Management Programme (UARMP) is a separate body from the WISC. The UARMP dates from September 1991 when a University Archivist was appointed to develop and implement a comprehensive programme to manage University Records.

3. National Library of Jamaica (NLJ)

Location of Archive:

Kingston, Jamaica

Date(s) of Material:

c. 1600-present

Scope and Structure:

The NLJ comprises 8 collections:

1. Audio-Visual

The Audio-Visual collections are available in a number of formats including phonodiscs, music and spoken-word audiocassettes, compact discs, videocassettes, and films.

2. Books and Pamphlets

This Collection consists of most of the important and significant works published about Jamaica and the West Indies from the 17th century to the present, numbering over 40,000 items. It includes many valuable and rare books which document early historical and descriptive accounts of Jamaica.

3. Cadastral Maps and Plans

This Collection consists of over 20,000 manuscripts items containing information on land holdings and the internal layout of estates and plantations covering the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. This collection is unique in the region. Material from it was used as the basis for Barry Higman's Jamaica Surveyed; plantation maps and plans for the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries (Kingston, Institute of Jamaica Publications, 1998).

4. Manuscripts

These consist of unpublished material such as plantation records, correspondence, diaries, and scrapbooks.

5. Newspapers

The Collection is the most comprehensive of Jamaican newspapers. It includes over 100 titles of dating back to 1718 when printing was introduced in Jamaica by Robert Baldwin. It is particularly strong in nineteenth and twentieth century newspapers. It has all the surviving copies of the Gleaner, the oldest continuous published Jamaican newspaper, which began in 1838.

6. Photographs

This large collection dates back to 1844 when Adolphe Duperly published his Daguerrian Excursions in Jamaica. It is a collection of views and public buildings taken by Duperly with the daguerreotype, printed in Paris. By the end of the 19th century photography had been well established in Jamaica and the Library has a representative collection of the works of many of these photographers such as J.B Valdez, Cleary and Elliott, Duperly and Sons and J.W. Brennan.

7. Posters, Calendars and Programmes

The National Library of Jamaica has in its collection over 900 samples of posters bearing various designs. It has a variety of calendars dating as far back as 1974 and programmes, which depict a particular culture, audience, group or organisation.

8. Prints

Prints consist of pictorial and graphic representation of life in Jamaica and the West Indies dating back to the seventeenth century.

Language/Scripts:

English, French and Spanish

Creating Agencies:

In 2007, the NLJ was assigned to the Ministry of Information, Culture, Youth and Sports.

Administrative/Biographical History of the Archive:

The idea to establish the NLJ was first mooted in the 1960s by the Jamaica Library Association and other organisations. Influenced by such ideas, the government established the National Council on Libraries, Archives and Documentation Services of Jamaica in 1973 to advise on the planning and coordinating of library and archive services. In a 1977 report entitled Plan for a National Documentation, Information and Library System for Jamaica, the Council recommended, among others, that a national library should be established. Consequently, on the first day of April 1979, the NLJ was established under the amended Institute of Jamaica Act of 1978. The NLJ was set up with lending materials, assets and staffing of the West India Reference Library (WIRL), which previously belonged to the Institute of Jamaica. In 2003, the Jamaican government drafted legislation to confirm the autonomy of the NLJ by establishing the Library as a corporate body and allowing it to provide the legal framework to formalize its mandates and operations.

Conditions governing access to the Material:

The records are open to the public.

Physical conditions and storage of Material:

Unknown

Existence of Finding Aids:

Index/Subject cards are available on site. Several catalogues such as the map collection are available online via the NLJ's intranet.

Other Relationships:

The Institute of Jamaica (IOJ) was created in 1879 and the WIRL in 1894. The WIRL was deposited into the National Library of Jamaica (NLJ) in 1979. Presently, the IOJ contains manuscripts and possibly still owns some of the WIRL materials and therefore stored in the IOJ. It is unclear what was transferred to the NLJ in 1979. According to Kenneth Ingram, "it is unfortunate that it is impossible to trace the provenance of many manuscripts now in the Institute of Jamaica, as either no record of their source was kept, or, if these require very extensive searching now to reveal them." (See, Kenneth E. Ingram, Sources of Jamaican History, 1655-1838, Zug, Switzerland: Inter Documentation, 1983, p. 82)

4. Roman Catholic Archbishop of Kingston, Archdiocese of Kingston, Chancery Office

Location of Archive:

Hopefield, St. Andrew, Jamaica

Date(s) of Material:

1795-present

Scope and Structure:

Ecclesiastical records are the basis of the materials stored in the archive. These records contain registers of baptismal, death, marriage and confirmation of individuals in Jamaica. The Archdiocese also contains correspondence of several former Archbishops of Kingston, Jesuit missions and diaries of some priests. Finally, it consists of some maps and plans of land and property owned in Jamaica by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Kingston.

Language/Scripts:

English, French, Spanish, Portuguese and Latin

Creating Agencies:

The Archdiocese of Kingston is the ecclesiastical territory in Jamaica, covering 3,267 Square Kilometres (1,261 Square Miles). Erected as a Vicariate Apostolic Jamaica o Jamaica on 10 January 1837, it was elevated as the Diocese of Kingston on 29 February 1956 and as the Archdiocese of Kingston on 14 September 1967. The Archdiocese is divided into five deaneries and includes an Episcopal Vicariate (St. Catherine). Currently, there are 30 Parishes and 30 Missions.

Administrative history of the Archive:

Unknown

Biographical history:

In 1516, the Spanish Crown established an Abbacy in Jamaica. English forces captured Jamaica in 1655, thereafter, establishing a number of Anglican churches. While the Catholic churches on Jamaica received the support of King James II and of Spanish, Irish, and French minorities. By the 1720s, Roman Catholics were forced to practice their faith in secrecy. In 1790, Jamaica's Catholic jurisdiction was reassigned and came under the auspices of the Apostolic of the London district, Rt. Rev. John D. Douglass. During the Haitian Revolution (1791-1803), many French and Creole persons fled the colony of St. Domingue to Jamaica thereby increasing the Catholic population. The earliest material held by the Archdiocese of Kingston dates back to 1791. They include baptismal, death and marriage registers. In 1837, a newly formed Vicariate of Jamaica was sanctioned by Rome. The Vicariate also received the ecclesiastical responsibilities of British Honduras and the Bahamas.

Conditions governing access to the Material:

The collection is to be used for research purposes only. The files are private as they contain personal religious information. Certified copies of documents are to be obtained through the Chancery Office.

Physical conditions and storage of Material:

The documents are stored in a vault located inside the Chancery's main building. Records are stored in metallic open shelves and filing cabinets. The roof of the archive/vault is prone to leakage during the hurricane season.
